

Recreation Use Permits

Objective

Using the recreation facilities in the field, ORP's will apply the principles for establishing fees and properly distinguish between the three fee categories to determine fees at recreation sites based on guidance in BLM Manual H-2930

Route

- Principles for Establishing Fees
- Three Fee Categories
- Exercise

Principles for Establishing Fees

- Fees implemented for visitor's convenience
- Fees are one part of funding strategy
- Fee revenues will not redirect base funding

Principles for Establishing Fees

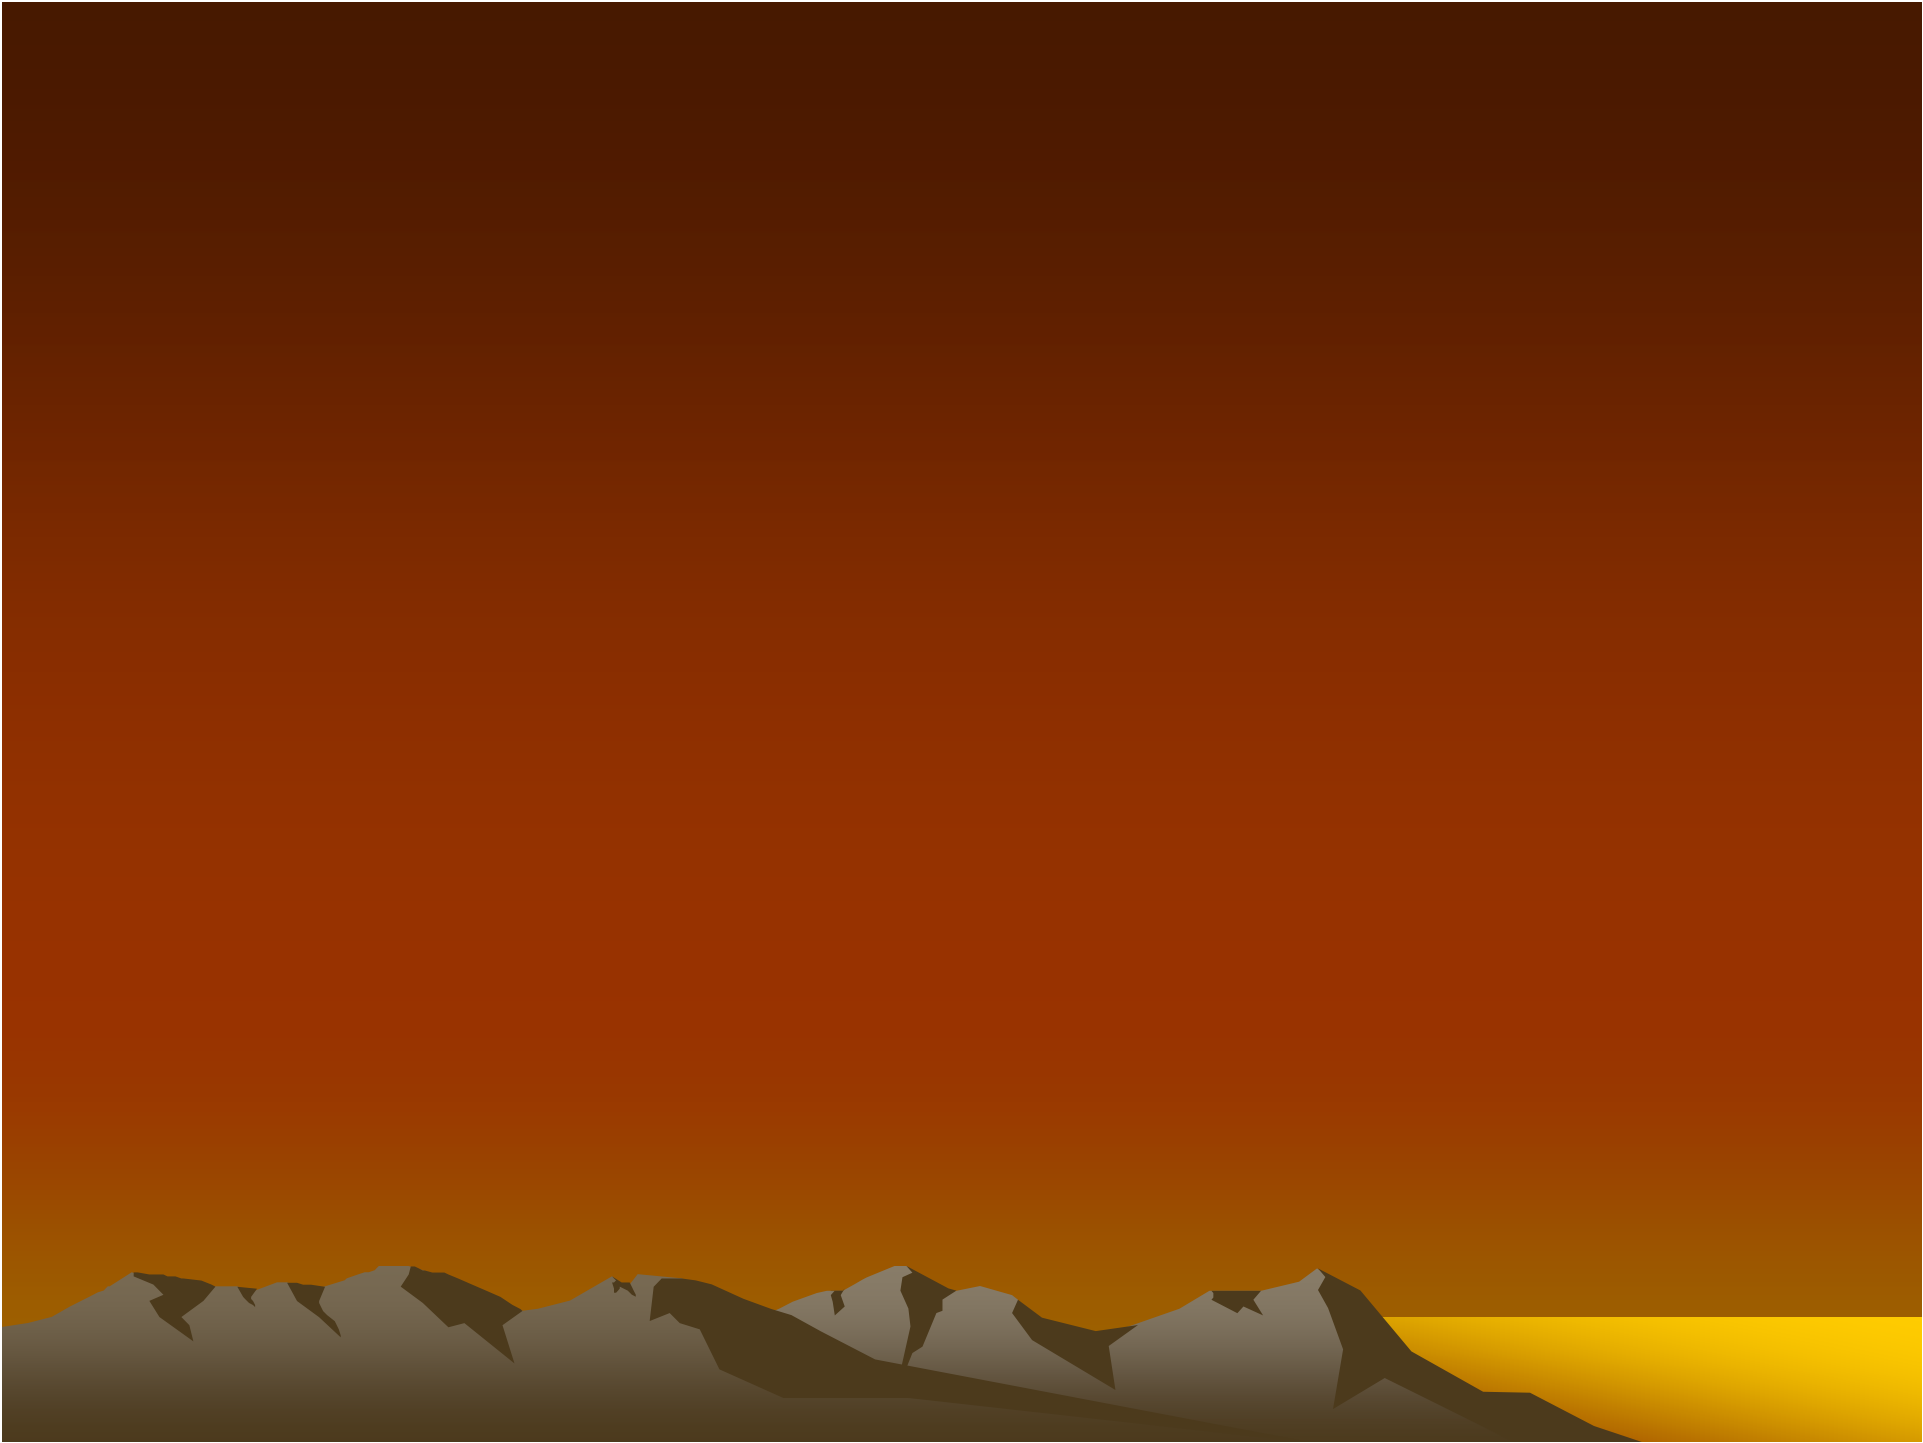

- Field offices will have a range of recreation opportunities
- Decision to charge or not to charge based on services and amenities
- Fees for sites that are already developed
- Fees used at site where collected

Principles for Establishing Fees

- Business plans are required
- Involve public in decision making
- Report to the public about fee expenditure
- BLM is accountable for fiscal integrity

Category I Free Sites and Services

100% Appropriated

Category II Standard Amenity Recreation Sites and Service Fees

Mix of Appropriated and User Generated

A Desert Diet

Smell the air and you likely will smell sagebrush. This shrub is important to wildlife for food and cover. It also helped Native Americans survive the desert. They wove clothing from its woody bark, brewed medicinal tea from its leaves, and burned its branches to keep warm.

Sagebrush
Artemisia tridentata
Silver cholla
Cholla

RED ROCK CANYON

National Conservation Area

Category III

Expanded Recreation Sites

Emphasis on User Generated Revenue

Exercise

Objective

Using the recreation facilities in the field, ORP's will apply the principles for establishing fees and properly distinguish between the three fee categories to determine fees at recreation sites based on guidance in BLM Manual H-2930

